ORDER EARLY. This suggestion is made to avoid disappointment in case that later in the season a variety may be sold out. We reserve the right to accept or refuse an order or any part thereof, depending on quantity of stock and whether at shipping time it is in condition to be sent.

All our varieties are true to name, but, if in shipping an error is made, we will be glad to rectify mistakes, either by supplying true stock or cash refund, which ever in our judgment seems best.

TERMS. MONEY WITH ORDER. Make checks or Money Orders payable to the

Fairmount Iris Gardens

We pay postage on all orders in U. S. A. that amount to $2.50, or over. We also allow a discount of 10% on all orders of $50.00 or more, except new varieties that are listed at net. We ship after blooming season until late Oct.; Beardless irises may be shipped in spring if so desired, all other stock listed will be shipped at proper time. We do not guarantee growth of plants in your garden; that rests with your ability. We do however guarantee good healthy stock and that it should reach you in good condition; any time a customer upon opening a package finds defective plants, he may at once ship them to us at our expense and his money be refunded. Our success depends on your satisfaction and we shall be glad to correct any error.

.. Foreword ..

There is an irresistible allure in the first pulsation of spring, in the anticipation of the flowering of new plants and the welcoming of old-time favorites. This is a bond of sympathy and understanding that is shared by all garden-minded men and women.

In most gardeners we note a deeply rooted wish for more flowers that will give a longer season of bloom, and the great interest of the present day is in the direction of acquiring more plants that will carry out this desire.

Each year in my catalogue it is my intention to present a list of plants which might well be termed the foundation of a summer flower garden, and to do this in such a manner that even the inexperienced gardeners may work out their own schemes of planting with very satisfactory results.

Frequently I have been asked by prospective customers concerning the size of plants which I send out, and in consequence, I am adding this quotation. One day last season a Federal plant inspector was here when we were shipping plants, and his comments were as follows: "If I were you I should certainly mention in your catalogue the size and splendid root growth of the plants which you send out, for in all my tours of inspection never have I seen such well-developed plants, such clean stock, and such strong root growth, as well as careful packing."

Ever since I blazed the trail by offering a large selection of Hemerocallis it has been extremely gratifying to note the intensive interest which has been displayed in this adventure. In the newer Hemerocallis or Daylilies we have a wealth of choice, for they come in varying shades—palest yellow, brilliant gold, orange, coppery pink, salmony pink, soft old rose and deep rose-reds, yet all unite in one perfect harmony of color, giving continuous bloom from May to September. These lily-like flowers, whose large and lovely clusters vary greatly in size, height and time of bloom, are borne well above the fresh green foliage. When once planted they need very little attention and are well worthy of a place of importance in any garden.

The more recent Oriental poppies are the last word in refinement of color, with their deep open goblets of white, flesh, lavender, salmon-pink, cherry-pink, silken old rose and ruby-red, and are singularly telling placed in groups or used in bold relief. They have an individuality of their own which is a most important factor in their use in garden pictures.

Of the modern delphiniums I prefer the Lyondel Hybrids and the Hood-acre Whites. They have extremely large flowers with a glorious range of color and are carried on strong, well branched stalks. In their first blooming they combine perfectly with Oriental poppies, in their second flowering, when grouped with the hemerocallis, they create a garden detail of splendid color contrast. Another excellent arrangement is that of delphiniums and peonies, for the attractive foliage of the latter will conceal the unsightliness of the delphiniums during their period of summer rest.

Of all loved flowers, none is more worthy of recognition than the iris, for in them we find almost complete range of color and they give us bloom from early spring until late autumn. Each year the Tall Bearded are more lovely and varied in size and hue, but it is to Dwarfs, Intermediates and Fall Blooming irises that we owe the long extension of season.

In the Beardless section we have the Siberians, the Japanese and the beautiful and little known Spurias, but the most glorious of all these irises are the Washington Hybrids of the Southern States species. Never shall I forget my first sight of them growing in great profusion, for they surpassed anything that I had hitherto seen, and instantly I succumbed to their exquisite beauty. Imagine a planting alight with white, pink, mauve, blue, copper, and velvety red, their color tones infinitely varied, but always harmonious, and you will have some little idea of their indefinable charm and refinement. They are perfectly hardy and bloom between the Tall Bearded and the Japanese.

A garden is so vital a thing, so filled with absorbing interest that it becomes a haven of peace where our cares and worries may be laid aside, and I say with confidence that in the inspiration of a garden lies the promise of a happy and contented life.

Tall Bearded Irises

Newer and Rarer Varieties

Excellent older irises especially priced will be found on pages 13-14

The bearded irises may be planted from July 1st to Sept. 15th. In making a new bed, take out the soil for about 12 in. If the drainage is poor, 2 in. of cinders or small stones should be placed in the bottom, over this 3 in. of sods or fair garden loam, then 4 in. of well rotted cow manure. Fill the rest of the bed with rich garden loam, with this mix a little bone meal. When finished the bed should be about 4 in. above surrounding ground. Spread out roots and plant 1 in. deep, water in when planting.

Apogon Irises

American Species and Hybrids

This group includes new and rare LOUISIANA and FLORIDA irises and especial attention is called to the named hybrids produced by Mr. T. A. WASHINGTON of Nashville, Tenn. These bloom just before the Japanese Irises and are a great addition to any garden.

CULTURE. If making a new bed for these irises, I advise well rotted cow manure and compost be mixed in the lower portion of excavated place, the upper portion being filled with good rich soil of slightly acid nature. These irises require plenty of moisture during their growing season, but no standing water during winter. Plant the rhizomes at least one inch deep, water in well and do not allow them to dry out. Late summer planting is best, for it enables the plants to start growth soon after their dormant season.

In fall give a good four inch mulch of peat moss, topped by three inches or more of marsh hay or straw. This heavy covering is to keep the plants from starting growth too early in the spring. When danger of freezing is over, remove the covering and work a little of the peat moss into the ground, also see they have an abundance of water until after blooming. These directions for covering, apply especially to our northern states. These Southern Species and Hybrids are perfectly hardy in my New England garden.

Oriental Poppies

Best of the American and Foreign Varieties.

CULTURE. Poppies are best planted during their dormant season or early fall growth, which is from August 1st to October. Choose strong Field Grown stock, not pot grown varieties. Plant crowns 2 in. deep in good garden loam, be sure that the ground does not settle and leave a hollow over the crown in which water may stand during winter. After first real freeze give green leaves a light mulch of excelsior or marsh hay.

Demerocallis

SPECIES AND RARE HYBRIDS

This list includes most of the species and a critical selection of the hybrids of American and foreign introduction. The season of bloom has been checked in my garden,

CULTURE. They may be planted in the spring or fall. Personally, I like fall planting. Set crown about 3 in. deep in rich garden loam. If soil is light and sandy it should be improved by the liberal addition of well-decayed cow manure, well mixed with rich loam. After ground has frozen give a light mulch for winter protection.
